Kids get Creative and Celebrate Mother's Day at WowART Studio

WowART Studio dedicates session to guide little ones to pay homage to Mums through art

Singapore (10 May 2010) – Following a successful hands-on session conducted in April, WowART Studio dedicated its second session to getting creative this Mother's Day – providing kids with an opportunity to put on their thinking caps and aprons to create gifts of art and make their mummies proud.

Playing host to a group of parent bloggers and their children, WowART Studio helped the participants understand art better from different perspectives and provided them with a an enriching session to express themselves through their craft pieces. The heartwarming experience was unanimously given the thumbs up and enjoyed by parents and kids alike.

Kids waiting for instructions on their art pieces, bloggers engrossed in creating their artpiece, blogger Mummy Kless & Co. before the start of the morning hands-on session, blogger Edmund and family showing off their art pieces after the session

"We had great fun laughing and trying our best to be creative!" exclaimed Edmund Tay (<http://edunloaded.com>), one of Singapore's hottest Daddy bloggers at the Blogger's Choice Awards 2008, after the morning hands-on session.

A busy working mum with an active son, blogger Sandra Tay (<http://sances.com>) said, "Jayvon and I had great fun this morning at WowART's interactive session and I'm so proud of his artwork!"

For more photos from the session, stay tuned to WowART's Facebook page - <http://www.facebook.com/WowART.Learning>

If you're interested, head down to WowART Studio for complimentary lessons (until end June) at 200 Upper Thomson Road, #01-10 Thomson Imperial Court (Opposite Longhouse).
